“ Aunt Agnes used to always call me "Her Supermodel". It is funny because I was always a tomboy and wanted to play sports with the guys. But during college I had this urge to step out of my comfort zone and compete in a pageant and ultimately was crowned Miss Black Harris County. Aunt Agnes loved this for me. She supported and checked on me throughout the entire time always asking how I was going to do my hair, what outfits I would wear , and how all the boys would love to see what I had on. Since that pageant her nickname for me became "My Supermodel". She always was so eager to see pictures of me on the beach and going on vacation when I would post on facebook. If I had not posted them on facebook she would "say show me your phone supermodel because I know you have some good pictures in there!" It got to a point where I would beat her to the punch and show her before she could even ask! Everytime I spoke to Aunt Agnes she was always up beat and had good spirits, for a long time I didnt even know the true battle she was having with cancer because at every family gathering she had a huge smile on her face and everyone would always gather around her for good conversation. I always enjoyed going to lawtell becasue I knew a time would be had. My bithday is the day after CHristmas so I am always in Louisiana visiting family during that time. For my 21st birthday (pictured) I had no plans, but AUnt Agnes said: we can't have that!". We took a family trip to the casino where I gambelled with my grandparents, uncle Boo Boo and Aunt Agnes. It is crazy to think I had so much fun with them on my 21st at Coushatta lol. My memories will never fade, and I'll always be your Supermodel!!
